case description: Customer is on vacation with her family for the Christmas holidays. It is also her son's birthday. When she arrived at the hotel, they told her that they didn't have her reservation. Apparently the hotel had overbooked reservations and now they don't have any room to accommodate her. As it's over the Christmas holidays, a lot of hotels in the area are sold out. I tried to look around the area to give her options, but it was hard to find options. I gave her 4 options, The Hilton by The Sea, The Five Seasons Inn, The Travel Resort, or the Marriott by Hilton. As she had to consult with her family, she told me she would call back later to give us her decision. I told her to hurry because hotels are selling out fast since it's the holidays. She understood. She also asked us if we could upgrade her room for the trouble. I told her we would have to check with out manager and would let her know when she calls back with her decision. For other agents reading this note, I already consulted with the manager. When she calls back to give us her decision on which hotel to stay, please upgrade her to the highest room available. We want to make it right.
